Holland Construction Announces “Mini-Stimulus” Equity-Financing Program To Jumpstart Contracting Projects.

SARASOTA, FL – March 2, 2010 – Holland Construction, a full-service construction contracting firm with offices in Florida, Pennsylvania and Maryland, has announced an innovative program that offers creative financial solutions and options to its customers.

The “EF-10” package, which allows companies to choose construction financing arrangements, deferred fees or the establishment of an ownership or equity position in a project, is designed to jumpstart certain jobs that may have stalled due to the lack of adequate funding.

Company president Joe Holland terms the program a “mini-stimulus” project that is geared toward owners and investors of commercial office buildings and retail centers, healthcare facilities, public projects including schools and libraries, and a variety of other user-occupied projects. The final determination of the equity or financing model best suited to the customer will be decided on a case-by-case basis, Holland explained.

“Although we detect a loosening of the equity markets, obtaining adequate financing remains a key obstacle in the initiation and completion of many construction projects,” Holland said. “We believe the EF-10 program will offer an attractive and compelling solution to certain companies, and allow them to move forward with their plans. Our ability to successfully implement this plan will benefit end-users, the sub-contractor industry and the overall business economy in our local markets,” he added.
